Not illustrated. 1876 Excerpt: ...a loss that neither cost nor art can repair. Trees which were worth three, four, or five pounds a tree they sold for four-pence, six-pence, or twelve-pence a tree. Fruittrees they rooted up; and dug up the heads of twelve great ponds, some of five or six acres each, and destroyed all the fish. The castle was served with water brought two miles by a conduit of lead: they cut up the pipe and sold it at six-pence a yard, making that waste for a poor inconsiderable sum that ??2000 will not make good. The mischief here was estimated at not less than ?100,000. The children of this family were taken from their mother and sent to Dorchester to be bred up in the true religion. 58. Sudley Castle. There is in the castle a goodly fair church: here they dig up the graves and disturb the ashes of the dead. They break down the ancient monuments of the Chandosos, and instead thereof leave a prodigious monument of their sacrilegious impiety. For each part of the church they find a peculiar way to profane it; the lower part of it they make their stable; the chancel their slaughterhouse. Unto the pulpit, which of all other places in probability might have escaped their impiety, they fasten pegs to hang the carcases of the slaughtered sheep. The communion table (according to their own language) they make their dresser, or chopping-board, to cut out their meat. Into the vault, wherein lay the bodies of the Chandoses, an ancient and honourable family, they cast the guts and garbage, mingling the loathsome entrails of beasts with those bones and ashes which did there rest in hope of a joyful resurrection. 59. In the Church of St. Marys, Warwick, in the east chapel, there was the monument of
