

The Athens Solution and Other Stories: The Athens Solution, The Tuesday Club, Interlude at Duanes, The Powder Monkey, and Kill Zone

The Athens Solution by Brad Thor For decades a terrorist organization known as 17 November wreaked havoc throughout Greece. For years, no member of the organization had ever been arrested, until a breakthrough occurred in 2002 when a prematurely detonated bomb gave clues that lead to 17 November safe houses, which contained additional caches of weapons, disguises and the groups signature .45-caliber Colt 1911 semiautomatic pistol used in some of their most high-profile assassinations. Since the 2002 raids things have been quiet in Greece, but intelligence officials are concerned that several members of the organization may have slipped through their net and have gone deeper underground. These same officials worry that if and when these last remaining members do surface again, it will be with a terrible vengeance. The Tuesday Club by Katherine Neville When Neville began her long-anticipated sequel to The Eight she was glad that she could revisit many fascinating historic figures, characters like Benjamin Franklin who, due to earlier constraints were limited to walk-on parts. Nevilles research offers a big surprise that, inexplicably, none of the Franklin experts appeared to have noticed. When it came to her characters well-documented, almost obsessive, penchant for creating or joining private clubs, here was an enigmatic gap in his life. The Tuesday Club fills that void. Interlude at Duanes by F. Paul Wilson F. Paul Wilsons urban mercenary Repairman Jack first appeared in his New York Times bestselling novel The Tomb. Jack is a denizen of Manhattan who dwells in the interstices of modern society. He has no official identity, no social security number, pays no taxes. When you lose faith in the system, or the system lets you down, you go to a guy whos outside the system. Thats Jack. But hes not a do- gooder. Hes a career criminal and works strictly fee-for-service. The Powder Monkey by Ted Bell In The Powder Monkey we travel back in time to 1880. Its the tale of a lovelorn newspapermans journey to the Channel Islands to learn the true story of the pirate captain Billy Bloods demise. In doing so, our hero learns how a small boy held captive aboard Bloods frigate, Mystere, is saved from certain death. The boys name is Alex Hawke. Kill Zone by Robert Liparulo Police sniper Byron Stone is a compilation of Liparulos acquaintances, including a SWAT sniper and an FBI sniper. These two men shared the qualities of quiet, nearly impenetrable machismo and subtly troubled spirits. The taking of lives made them each respect life that much more. They would kill only when it would save more lives, or a more innocent life. A snipers knowledge that his job is necessary, crashing headlong into his humanity?this was the conflict Liparulo wanted to explore with Byron. Kill Zone opens a window on the police snipers moral struggle.
